

ENGLAND MAD OVER OUTRAGE

Sinking of the Knight Commander Has Roused the British Ire to a Dangerous State.

VIOLATES INTERNATIONAL LAW

The Destruction of Neutral Shipping by Russian Vessels Is Declared Illegal--Much Trouble Is Expected.

(Special by Scripps-McLac.)

London, July 27.—The news from the seat of war today is regarded as distinctly unfavorable to Russia and as verifying the plan of campaign of the Japanese commander, which already has been outlined in these dispatches. The turning of the right flank of the Russian army to the west of Tashchi Kiao, the consequent evacuation by the Russians of New Chwang and Yin Kow; the closing in of Nodzu's columns on Hui Cheng; the completion of Kuroki's great flanking movement to the east, where he has driven Kuropatkin's left wing back on Liao Yang, all mean but one thing according to British experts, and that is the forced concentration of Kuropatkin at Liao Yang and the annihilation of his army.

The first part of this program, it is believed from the dispatches received during the last few days, has been accomplished. Whether the last will be successful the next few days will demonstrate.

Kuropatkin Has One Chance.
The opinion here is that Kuropatkin's only salvation lies in a rapid concentration of his army and the hurling of its full forces on Kuroki without delay. It is regarded as possible that Kuropatkin may, if this is done quickly, break through Kuroki and make his way to Harbin with what is left of his force. If he attempts to hold the southern positions until Kuroki has had time to strengthen his position it is believed here the Russian army is doomed.

The impression is gaining ground here that the assault on Port Arthur will be postponed until the Manchurian campaign has been fought out.

Going North.
London, July 27.—A dispatch from Tokyo last night says the Vladivostok fleet has been sighted going north. They have sunk another Japanese steamer.

Want War.
London, July 27.—What action will the British government take in regard to the sinking of the British steamer Knight Commander by the Russian Vladivostok squadron off the east coast of Japan? This question is being very generally asked here today. If the government should be guided by popular feeling there is no doubt but that a sharp note would be sent to St. Petersburg demanding full reparation and a complete disavowal of the act of her naval command. If the government should go even further and send British warships to the scene of the Russian raiders it would meet with the approval of a large section of the community which declares openly that the unprovoked sinking of a British ship without taking her before a prize court is an open act of war and should be so regarded.

The government, beyond sending a note to St. Petersburg, indicating the fact that it has noted the act, will not, it is informed, take further action until it has received a full report of the occurrence.

Men who can by no means be considered alarmists regard the situation as critical.

Says Russia Was Right.
Among naval men, however, may be found a disposition to regard Russian action as well within her rights. An officer holding high rank in the navy said today: "This excitement is without real foundation. In the Red sea matter, Russia unquestionably was wrong, but she has gone no further than she had a right to go in the case of the Knight Commander. The status of the vessel making her seizure is beyond question. If, in the judgment of the officer in command, it was best to sink her he had a right to do so. He could have sent her to a home port with a prize crew, released her under a bottoming bond and had her go to a neutral port, or do as he did, take off her crew and papers and sink her. If he made a mistake his government would have to pay full damages. This is a matter for negotiation, but nothing to get angry about." This expresses the best naval and diplomatic view.

Formosa Held by Prize Crew.
Suez, July 27.—The Peninsular & Oriental liner Formosa arrived here yesterday afternoon in charge of a prize crew and flying the Russian naval flag. The Formosa was seized by the British cruiser Smolensk in the Red sea. The Formosa left Suez on July 23 bound for Yokohama. It is thought that she will soon be released, pending the decision regarding the status of the volunteer cruisers which is now being argued in St. Petersburg, and which is the subject of diplomatic representation by Great Britain.

British Investigate.
Tokyo, July 27.—Sir Claude McDonald, British minister in Japan, has instituted a searching inquiry into the sinking of the British steamer Knight Commander by the Russian Vladivostok squadron. He will take the testimony of the crew of the Knight Commander and examine the officers of the steamer Tsinan, which brought the Knight Commander's crew into port.

German Vessel.
Suez, July 27.—The German steamer Holsatia arrived today with a Russian prize crew aboard, but was subsequently released.

At Agiers.
Algiers, July 27.—The steamer Malacca which was seized in the Red sea by the Russian cruiser St. Petersburg has arrived here with a prize crew in charge.

Unconfirmed Rumor.
London, July 27.—The Daily Mail received a dispatch from Suez which states it is rumored there that Japanese warships were sighted in the Red sea. The report is unconfirmed.

Heavy Casualties.
Washington, July 27.—A dispatch from Tokyo to the Japanese legation states the Japanese casualties in the battle of Tashichiao were eight hundred. The Russian army consisted of five divisions. The Japanese took all the positions commanding Tashichiao and are now pursuing the enemy.

Has Been Released.
London, July 27.—The Peninsular & Oriental company announce they received a cablegram stating that their steamer the Formosa which was captured by the Russian volunteer vessel in the Red sea and taken to Suez, has been released and is now proceeding to Yokohama.

Latest Outrage Angers British.
London, July 27.—Energetic action in the case of the sinking of the British steamer Knight Commander by the Vladivostok squadron is being taken by the British government. All information received by the government tends to establish in the official mind a belief that an outrage has been committed for which no excuse exists in international law. Those aware of the feelings of the ministry said that all the members of the cabinet are in accord regarding the principle of the inviolability of innocent neutral shipping as well as upon the principle that a neutral ship cannot legally be destroyed, even if carrying contraband of war.

Demands for Retribution.
The demands which will be made upon the Russian government will include compensation to the owners of the ship and to the owners of the goods on board the Knight Commander, an apology for the action of the Russian cruisers, and an agreement that instructions be given which will prevent a repetition of such action.

British ship owners are up in arms over the dangers which shipping is now running, and are bombarding the government with representations looking to the thorough protection of their interests. Public feeling runs high despite all diplomatic assurances that Russia will make reparation.

Arthur Cohen, one of the counsel for the British government in the Alabama claims arbitration case, now a judge of the Circuit courts and standing counsel for the University of Cambridge, said:

"It is scandalous, this reckless seizure and destruction of neutral shipping by Russian vessels. The sinking of the Knight Commander was totally illegal. Wheaton, in his work on international law, states explicitly that if the prize is a neutral ship on circumstances will justify her destruction before condemnation; that if the vessel is destroyed full compensation must be given to her owner, but that owners of contraband of war on board the ship, if any, have no substantial ground for complaint. It is because the destruction of the vessel does not injure them."

leaved, pending the decision regarding the status of the volunteer cruisers which is now being argued in St. Petersburg, and which is the subject of diplomatic representation by Great Britain.

POLICY IS NOW DEFINED

President Roosevelt Defines His Future Policy to the Committee Which Formally Announced His Nomination by the National Convention, This Afternoon.

(Special by Scripps-McLac.)

Oyster Bay, July 27.—President Roosevelt was officially notified today of his nomination at Chicago. In addition to the committee of notification were a number of distinguished guests especially invited by the president, and a goodly gathering of kin. A special hearing the party arrived at Oyster Bay at 11:25. They drove in carriages to Sagamore Hill. The town people were not permitted to attend. Speaker Cannon for the committee, informed the president of his nomination in a brief speech. He said the republican party under Roosevelt had kept its record which it began under Lincoln of "doing things." He expressed his confidence in Roosevelt's election in November. The speech was cheered. The president responded. When he finished he was cheered and congratulated and shook hands with those present. The party left on a special train at 3:30 o'clock.

President Roosevelt, in replying to the committee which notified him of his nomination for the presidency by the Republican national convention at Chicago, said:

"Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the notification committee: I am deeply sensible of the high honor conferred upon me by the representatives of the Republican party assembled in convention, and I accept the nomination for the presidency with solemn realization of principles which the Republican national convention has adopted, and at some future day I shall communicate to you, Mr. Chairman, more at length and in detail a formal written acceptance of the nomination.

"Three years ago I became president because of the death of my lamented predecessor. I then stated that it was my purpose to carry out his principles and policies for the honor and interest of the country. To the best of my ability I have kept the promise thus made. If next November my countrymen confirm at the polls the action of the convention you represent, I shall, under Providence, continue to work with an eye single to the welfare of all our people.

On Record of Achievement.
"A party is of worth in so far as it promotes the national interest, and every official, high or low, can serve his party best by rendering to the people the best service of which he is capable. Effective government comes only as the result of the loyal cooperation of many different persons. The members of a legislative majority, the officers in the various departments of the administration, and the legislative and executive branches as toward each other, must work together with subordination of self to the common end of successful government. We who have been entrusted with power as public servants during the past seven years of administration and legislation now come before the people content to be judged by our record of achievement. In the years that have gone by we have made the deed square with the word; and if we are continuing in power we shall unflinchingly follow out the great lines of public policy which the Republican party has already laid down; a public policy to which we are giving, and shall give, a united, and therefore an efficient, support.

Not Silent on Any Vital Question.
"In all of this we are more fortunate than our opponents, who now appeal for confidence on the ground, which some express and some seek to have confidentially understood, that if triumphant they may be trusted to prove false to every principle which in the last eight years they have laid down as vital, and to leave undisturbed those very acts of the administration because of which they ask that the administration itself be driven from power. Seemingly their present attitude as to their past record is that some of them were mistaken and others insincere. We make our appeal in a wholly different spirit. We are not constrained to keep silent on any vital question; we are decided on no vital question; our policy is continuous, and is the same for all sections and localities. There is nothing experimental about the government we ask the people to continue in power, for our performance in the past, our proved governmental efficiency, is a guarantee as to our promises for the future. Our opponents, either openly or secretly, according to their several temperaments, now ask the people to trust their present promises in consideration of the fact that they intend to treat their past promises as null and void. We know our own mind, and we have kept of the same mind for a sufficient length of time to give to our policy coherence and sanity. In such a fundamental matter as the enforcement of the law we do not have to depend upon promises, but merely to ask that our record be taken as an earnest of what we shall continue to do.

The Record as to Trusts.
"In dealing with the great organization known as trusts, we do not have to explain why the laws were not enforced, but to point out that they actually have been enforced and that legislation has been enacted to increase the effectiveness of their enforcement. We do not have to propose to 'turn the rascals out,' for we have shown in every deed that whenever by diligent investigation a public official can be found who has betrayed his trust he will be punished to the full extent of the law without regard to whether he was appointed under a Republican or a Democratic administration. This is the efficient way to turn the rascals out and to keep them out, and it has the merit of sincerity. Moreover the betrayals of trust in the last seven years have been insignificant in numbers, when compared with the extent of the public service. Never has the administration of the government been on a cleaner and higher level; never has the public work of the nation been done more honestly and efficiently.

The Gold Standard.
"Assuredly it is unwise to change the policies which have worked so well and which are now working so well. Prosperity has come at home. The national honor and interest have been upheld abroad. We have placed the finances of the nation upon a sound gold basis. We have done this with the aid of many who were formerly our opponents, but who would neither openly support nor silently acquiesce in the heresy of unsound finance; and we have done it against the combined and violent opposition of the mass of our present opponents who still refuse to recant the unsound opinions which for the moment they think it inexpedient to assert. We know what we mean when we speak of an honest and stable currency. We mean the same thing from year to year. We do not have to avoid a definite and conclusive commitment on the most important issue which has recently been before the people, and which may at any time in the near future be before them again. Upon the principles which underlie this issue the convictions of half of our number do not clash with those of the other half. So long as the Republican party is in power the gold standard is settled, not as a matter of temporary political expediency, not because of shifting conditions in the production of gold in certain mining centers, but in accordance with what we regard as the fundamental principles of national morality and wisdom. Under the financial legislation which we have enacted there is now ample circulation for every business need; and every dollar of this circulation is worth a dollar in gold. We have reduced the interest-bearing debt and in still larger measure the interest on that debt. All of the war taxes imposed during the Spanish war have been removed with a view to relieve the people and to prevent the accumulation of an unnecessary surplus. The result is that hardly ever before have the expenditures and income of the government so closely corresponded. In the fiscal year that has just closed the excess of income over the ordinary expenditures was nine millions of dollars. This does not take account of the fifty millions expended out of the accumulated surplus for the purchase of the Isthmian canal.

Tariff Schedules.
"We have enacted a tariff law under which during the past few years the country has attained a height of material well-being never before reached. Wages are higher than ever before. That whenever the need arises there should be a readjustment of the tariff schedules is undoubted; but such

We have done this with the aid of many who were formerly our opponents, but who would neither openly support nor silently acquiesce in the heresy of unsound finance; and we have done it against the combined and violent opposition of the mass of our present opponents who still refuse to recant the unsound opinions which for the moment they think it inexpedient to assert. We know what we mean when we speak of an honest and stable currency. We mean the same thing from year to year. We do not have to avoid a definite and conclusive commitment on the most important issue which has recently been before the people, and which may at any time in the near future be before them again. Upon the principles which underlie this issue the convictions of half of our number do not clash with those of the other half. So long as the Republican party is in power the gold standard is settled, not as a matter of temporary political expediency, not because of shifting conditions in the production of gold in certain mining centers, but in accordance with what we regard as the fundamental principles of national morality and wisdom. Under the financial legislation which we have enacted there is now ample circulation for every business need; and every dollar of this circulation is worth a dollar in gold. We have reduced the interest-bearing debt and in still larger measure the interest on that debt. All of the war taxes imposed during the Spanish war have been removed with a view to relieve the people and to prevent the accumulation of an unnecessary surplus. The result is that hardly ever before have the expenditures and income of the government so closely corresponded. In the fiscal year that has just closed the excess of income over the ordinary expenditures was nine millions of dollars. This does not take account of the fifty millions expended out of the accumulated surplus for the purchase of the Isthmian canal.

Tariff Schedules.
"We have enacted a tariff law under which during the past few years the country has attained a height of material well-being never before reached. Wages are higher than ever before. That whenever the need arises there should be a readjustment of the tariff schedules is undoubted; but such compared with the extent of the public service. Never has the administration of the government been on a cleaner and higher level; never has the public work of the nation been done more honestly and efficiently.

The Gold Standard.

WONDERFUL SCENES FROM EVERY CLIME REPRESENTED

The Mississippi Golf Club Pike Was Filled with World-Wide Wonders... Beautiful Scenes.

Two thousand people surged back and forth along the wide avenue lined with dainty bazaar, mysterious show tents, and flaming banners at the grounds of the Country club last evening. The glare of the street lamps and the subdued glow of the Chinese lanterns—hundreds of them hung in parallel rows in front of the exhibits—brought into relief the strangest scene that had ever before been witnessed in Janesville or its environs. Fierce brown men from the Philippines; languorous beauties from the Turkish palace attired in gorgeous colors and glittering with precious jewels; dainty little Japanese arrayed in silken gowns and wearing the bloomers of April upon their cheeks; maidens from the far-off dikes of Holland in quaint caps of white and wooden shoes; soldiers and sailors of many and every nationality; showmen in battered silk hats; Turkish musicians playing the haunting melodies of the Streets of Cairo, Spanish senoritas, low German comedians in atrocious make-ups, cauc-rack men, colored "mammys" and gypsy fortune tellers, contributed their part in a fantasia that was almost truthful and convincing. Even as this plot of color appealed to the eye, there fell upon the ear the din of the barker, the mellow voices of the plantation minstrels, the sounds of throbbing drums and squeaky horns, the blare of the brass instruments of a band playing some popular waltz, the raucous voices made on a sheet-iron water heater in front of the snake-eater's tent, and the notes of some sweet yodel song from the German theater. Those who missed "The Pike" will never be forgiven by their friends.

"Pierette the High Diver" performed that attracted the big attendance in the afternoon. About six o'clock in the evening, however, there came a lull and the whole street rested until twilight began to fall. The parade of the Orientals from the Turkish theater with the pipers from the "Geese Game" bringing up the rear, set the ball in motion. Shortly thereafter the Imperial band, led by Edward Peterson and Charles Hostwick, announcing the wonderful high dive, commenced their march to the windmill. J. L. Wilcox mounted the ladder from which he was to make his perilous feat, with perfect composure, while the great crowd that had gathered there held its breath. He disappeared behind the canvas flaps that concealed the platform. Presently a form emerged and poised for a moment on the narrow ledge. Then a great shout went up from the spectators as the being was launched into the open air and describing several parabolic curves, landed with a dull thud near the tank of water below. Out of the shadows rushed two attendants with a blanket. Throwing this grateful protection over the intrepid diver, they gently lifted him and bore his prostrate form into the darkness.

The Oriental Theater. A low portfolio filled with costly oriental rugs and divans and bathed in red light attracted the visitor to the Oriental theater. Here dark skinned beauties with scarlet caps and massive earrings loomed luxuriously and feligned enjoyment of the nardich pipes that helped complete the appointments. It may be of interest to know that the furnishings for this attraction, secured by George McKee, represented a valuation of over $15,000. The Turkish ladies were: Mrs. Charles Hostwick, Mrs. J. L. Myers, Mrs. H. H. Bliss and theresses Daisy Wilcox and Mary Hostwick. Brownell was ticket seller. Mark Hostwick presided at the megaphone and the dark and mysterious "Tripoli" orchestra with red fezes and gaudy costumes were Fred Eddien, Charles Scott, Morris Erickson, and Arthur Baumann. The performance within opened up with some fine acrobatic work by Alfred Griswold and James Gregory. Kramer Doty and Miss Bessie Birch, the latter in the beautiful costume of a Spanish senorita and bearing a tambourine, sang a delightful oriental song that charmed the listeners. A swarthy neomancer, garbed in a bejeweled turban of white, a black gown with an enormous sash of red, then mounted the stage. It was George McKee, proprietor of the show. His faithful slaves, Victor Galbraith and Douglas McKee, prepared the paraphernalia that before the final act of "Alaskan" the whirling dervish would dance for the audience. Orion Sutherland in the latter role wore a handsome costume purchased in Alaskan by M. G. Jeffris some years ago. The underwarmer, perhaps, was purchased nearer home. He promissed in the sandals of the turned up toes and whirled until he reeled dizzily from the stage amid the shouts of an audience convulsed with laughter. The magician came next. He allowed his hands to be tied by a spectator and a piece of rope passed between his body and his hands, one of the on-lookers holding both ends. Then with a dexterous movement he freed himself with the greatest of ease. A half dollar marked by one of the audience and placed on a wand was magically conveyed to the center of a ball of yarn. Glasses of brandy were converted to bon bons and other startling tricks performed. In the midst of these wonders the barker would shout complainingly that there was a large crowd waiting outside and the performance would be brought to a termination.

Japanese Village. Chrysanthemums and greens of tissue paper, used lavishly in the decorative work, combined with innumerable lanterns of all sizes, tapestries and other oriental furniture made the Japanese Village a scene of surpassing beauty. Dainty food and waters and tea were served at a score of tables and the pavilion was one of the most popular on the grounds. William Jeffris, in the garb of the mikado, acted as barker and Mrs. Frank Blodgett was in charge. The Japanese ladies who acted as waiters were: Mrs. Ross King and the Misses Louise Shearer, Harriet Bostwick, Little Whitton, Vera Wilcox, Mabel Jackson, Margaret MacGregor, Winifred Elfield, and Josephine Farnsworth. The Japanese singers who entertained the guests at intervals were: the Misses Daisy MacLean, Ada Longley, and Pearl Peters. There were nine "Little Japs": Dorothy MacLean, Bob Elfield, Cal Blodgett, Gene Jeffris, Catharine Jeffris, Clara Blodgett, Margaret Jeffris, Marlan Blodgett, and Elizabeth Holmes.

German Village. Echoes from the ears in the vicinity of the German theater, William Rager was the blind and affable "Dutchman" who praised the merits of his attraction and the encomiums were fully justified by the performance. The Tyrolean twins, Prof. Thiele with a guitar and Tony Hannuska, sang several duets, one of the songs being in German, and were applauded enthusiastically after each turn. Then came the rural dance with accordion accompaniment. The Misses Agnes Shumway, Anna Valentine, and Helen Nash, wore costumes consisting of white caps, black bodices, skirts of green, yellow and red, and wooden shoes. They danced with Ned Whitton, Charles Reynolds, and Sam Eche. The who were dressed in German and flourishing a huge sword, was portrayed by Dick McNeil. The marines who took part in this terrific conflict were: Harry Lawless, Curtis Carpenter, Douglas King, and Victor Eddien. Charles Putnam succeeded Mr. Richardson. Within the enclosure David Atwood in a long linen duster and plug hat told about the marvellous ship which was "launched in the ice sea and sailed in the Dead Sea" before he, Mr. Eddien, burned the red fire and set off the marvellous pyrotechnic display behind the scenery.

The Snake Eater. The Guy Brothers, Charles and Al, established themselves as showmen of the "first water" by providing an exhibition that made the ladies and children scream. It was popularly supposed that the toy snakes, or stuffed ones at best, would do service in the reptiles' den. But the Messrs. Guy were ambitious. They went out on a still hunt for a man who would toy with real, live ones yesterday morning. H. F. Rook agreed to do the turn. A score or more of "green karters" of various sizes were secured and placed in the den. Mr. Rook had intended at first merely to allow the snakes to gambol in his hair and twine around his neck, but when the big audience gathered around the canvas pit, he became enthusiastic and bit the heads from several of the wriggling creatures. Charles Guy under a conspicuous Mexican hat beat the drum, while Al Guy acted as ticket agent, and Herbert Hornoff of Milwaukee and Chester Morse shrieked through the megaphones.

Gypsies And "Goose Game". Up at the north end of the platform Mrs. C. C. McLean and Miss Bristol, two Hungarian Gypsies, with faces stained and gorgeously garbed to fit the part, told wonderful fortunes with cards and drew aside the curtains of the future for the credulous. Miss Dolly McLean was ticket agent and Clarence Burdick called out the passers-by. One of the most amusing features on the grounds was the "Goose Game" in charge of M. C. Hanna, D. H. Foster and Don Van Wart of Detroit. Attired in grotesque costumes and speaking a dialect of low German they persuaded venturesome pedestrians to try luck in ringing the necks of two patient old ganders which were chained in the center of the enclosure. The rings were made of rope and tempting prizes of golf balls were offered to the successful. The wise old birds had learned their parts and dodged every ring that seemed in danger of looping them.

"A Terrible Explosion". Ed Peterson and Ned Whitton, managers of "Lumette, the Flying Lady" and the moving picture show had the mortification of seeing the tide turning away from their exhibition as the evening wore on. They resorted to an expedient that immediately attracted the public gaze to them. Cold water was turned into the boiler of the engine stationed just outside followed. They then took advantage of the gathering to coax the spectators in to see the wonderful "Lumette." She was a wax figure swung through the upper air with a rope. Misfortune again overtook the management when she slipped from her moorings, fell, and broke in two. This, however, was soon mended. Without the engine it became necessary to turn the curtain roller which hoisted the "moving pictures" by hand. Though crippled the managers did not lose courage and in admiration of their pluck many patronized the performance out of purely charitable motives, though the show was well worth the money.

Imperial Band Pleased

The work of the Imperial band whose ranks were depleted somewhat by "loans" to the Royal Hungarian orchestra management delighted everyone with their renditions and in their marches lead large crowds from show to show. The players were: Leader Al Kneff, Frank Snyder, Geo. Minchew, Geo. Gray, Henry Koehen, Archie Withler, Martin Vorbeck, John Kobelin, Clinton Barker, Vernon Murdock, Dean Peterson, H. D. Ogden, Wm. Dettner, William Lawyer, George L. Hatch, Tony Benkert.

Restaurants on the Pike. Surfeited with amusement for the nonce and seeking rest and refreshment, many turned to "Old Vienna" where delicious coffee, sandwiches, potato salad, and "wiennies" were served. Harry Carter was barker for this restaurant and the ladies in charge were: Mrs. H. G. Carter, and Mesdames William Greenman, J. A. Sutherland, W. H. Judd, Edward Peterson, and Charles Putnam. In a booth at the head of the "avenue" Mesdames J. P. Baker, Orion Sutherland, Anthony Stericker, and Francis Grant furnished the thirsty with lemonade and the hungry with popcorn and peanuts. They also did a good business in cigars. Marshall Richardson was barker for the handsome little candy booth on the east side and Mrs. John Rexford and the Misses Josephine Carle and Lizzie Schleicher had charge of the dainty wares which were "not grocery store candy by any means." Long after the ice had all been sold at the Japanese Village, the ice cream booth across the way was serving crowds of wayfarers. Mrs. Arthur Harris and Mrs. J. C. Page were in charge and they were assisted by Mrs. W. D. Holmes, Mrs. Hoover, Mrs. J. W. Carle and the Misses Alice Rager, Catharine Elfield, Richardson, and Warner.

Battle of Port Arthur

But to return to the shows: At the extreme end of the street of wonders Charles Bostwick called loudly to the throng advising his hearers not to miss the scene of the spectacle which he had behind the canvas—the Battle of Port Arthur and the Destruction of the Battleship Retzkan. Victor Richardson took tickets at first but insisted on resigning after he had talked with some of the visitors who had seen the show. He did not believe he was qualified to act—the responsibilities connected with such a marvellous entertainment were too large. Admiral Togo, made up like an Irish brigand and flourishing a huge sword, was portrayed by Dick McNeil. The marines who took part in this terrific conflict were: Harry Lawless, Curtis Carpenter, Douglas King, and Victor Eddien. Charles Putnam succeeded Mr. Richardson. Within the enclosure David Atwood in a long linen duster and plug hat told about the marvellous ship which was "launched in the ice sea and sailed in the Dead Sea" before he, Mr. Eddien, burned the red fire and set off the marvellous pyrotechnic display behind the scenery.

The Filipino Village

Adjoining the battleship panorama was the village of the terrible Igorrotes. They were clad in brown tunics, with white waist-cloths and huge nose rings glistening on their black and ferocious countenances. In the center of their enclosure was a bonfire around which they danced with blood curdling howls and brandished war-clubs and off to one side was their hut of bushes. The war dance concluded, one villainous looking cannibal wearing spectacles, seized a dog which had been chained in the village and rushed to a corner nearby where a huge hopper awaited the canine. Amid many yelps the crank of the sausage machine was turned and presently there issued from an aperture a whole string of the dainty viennewursts. These were offered to the audience, with a show of friendliness, but few partook. The personnel of the Igorrotes were: George King, H. H. King, J. C. Ulrich, H. L. McClure, and David Holmes.

Plantation Minstrels

Arnold Tift advertised the Plantation Minstrels and the performance given by them was well worth the admission fee. Conley Butler with the guitar and Leonard Artis with the mandolin furnished the instrumental accompaniment for the singing and the quartette attracted many with their open air singing of "The Blues" to live and holler till I die" and other similar selections. The "cast" included Charles Achterberg, Interlocutor, E. A. Blaney, Harry Phillips, and E. C. Baumann.

Some Free Lances

Mac, Mount and Frank Jackman conducted "come you ring" racks and Stanley Tallman was proprietor of several racks of nigger babies which, when hit by baseballs, entitled the thrower to a ten cent cigar secured at a bargain counter. E. M. Marzoff called in seductive tones to the way to try their luck, alternating in the good work with Dr. Whiffen and Roy Wisner. Miss Mauda Jackman and Mrs. Frank Jackman, masked and clad in red gingham gowns and sun-bonnets were two "Aunt Dinahs" who overhauled pedestrians and persuaded them to take a draw from grab bags. Mrs. Brownell in Flemish costume was an agent for miniature feather dusters, squeakers, return balls, and candy.

The Great Moral Show

Dr. L. L. Leslie was proud of his great moral show. In his plug hat, white vest, and frock coat he paraded with a grandiloquent air through the mazes of the exhibition tent, his 1,756 carat diamond glittering happily. H. H. Bliss, also clad in the spotless waistcoat and the shining tie, spoke in mournful cadences from a dry goods box of the great cost of assembling such an exhibition and of the many people who would be unable to see it. His explanations of the wonders were so illuminating that considerable difficulty was experienced in getting rid of the audience. Paul Leslie posed as "Soppernam the Singalese dwarf," who, according to the venerable lecturer was 27 years old and had any amount of aunts and grandparents, all of whom were in the poorhouse. William Dougherty was "Madame Dacoma," the bag puncher who "would give an entertainment but one couldn't tell when," and Fay Edgington was "Madame Antikamnia," the albino. Bernard Palmer had a fine make-up as "Caleowagowa" the Zulu chief who "never smiled and ate human ears for breakfast" and E. J. Bernard was good as "Spikeline," the three legged man, with "one limb so tired that he couldn't use it." At one end of the tent sat "Hessin Ali" the giant, who was "ironed out every Monday morning and gained seven inches after each operation. Thomas Nolan sat three hours with his feet strapped to the posts, but showed no discomfort when he rose to brush the cobwebs from the top of the tent. John Shener made an alluring "Madame Gilsneret" the snake-charmer who "had been discovered in the wilds of Africa using a boa constrictor three feet wide as a belt. Poison did not affect her system—she had no system. The snakes tongue which had been pulled would remain so until the end of the performance." Signor Sardine Sapolo, leader of the Royal Hungarian orchestra, was impersonated by Charles Gage who wore several score of medals on his breast. He gracefully swung the baton for the following musicians: Jack Fletcher, C. W. Cronmiller, W. W. Menzies, W. M. Tanberg, W. W. Brunsen, H. G. Shurtloft, Richard Fleck, Ray Stewart, George Schaller, and Oscar Buckley. This show proved one of the biggest drawing cards of the entire assembly. Fumly Burke was at the megaphone for this show.

Dance in Club House. In the foregoing account mention of the marvellous two faced lady designed by Dick McNeil and exhibited in the German village was overlooked. Also the statue of the Gaiety which suspiciously turned to life in the same tent. "Gaiety" looked suspiciously like a plaster of paris cast of Venus de Milo. She was turned to life by Miss Agnes Shumway. During the progress of the evening C. C. MacLean acted as barker for the Queen of the Gypsies and also for the dance given in the clubhouse at "five cents a swing."

Great Credit Due

Great credit is due to the management and everyone concerned in the performance. C. C. MacLean was the boss canvas-man and had all his tents in readiness on Sunday. He labored five solid days in getting these tents and having them placed in position. J. P. Baker, assisted by Wilson Lane and Arthur Stericker had charge of the sale of the tickets. Charles Bostwick, Peter L. Myers and Curtis Carpenter hung all of the banners. The Pike was a great success in every way. It is estimated that over $200 will be realized, clear of all expenses.

MADISON DIVINE RESENTS LETTER

Asks for Publicity of the Leaving of Rev. Campbell for St. Paul Church.

Madison, Wis., July 25. Editor of Janesville Gazette: Dear Sir—in a late issue of your paper is a "special" from Madison dated July 21, which is exceedingly misleading in its statements, which in the interest of truth I desire to correct. The Pilsen Congregational church of this city was organized in April, 1901, and soon after called Rev. C. C. Campbell from Hartford, Wis., to its pastorate. So he could not have "advocated the building of a new church for several years past." He began services in a chapel with only a Sunday school of about seventy-five members and has gathered a good congregation, increased the Sunday school to an average attendance of 111 the past year. A Christian Endeavor society of sixty has been secured and has increased the church membership from 41 to 80. He has been successful in starting the enterprise of enlargement of the chapel and has carried it forward with rare skill and energy. He has been supported by his people in the preliminary work of a new foundation for the chapel and in the raising of money for present improvements. Having received a call, unsought by him, from the Plymouth Congregational church of St. Paul, which offered him a more important field of usefulness, he tendered his resignation which was respectfully accepted by his church. It is conceded by all that his pastorate has been a very successful one and the prayers of his people go with him for a like success in the field to which he goes. In view of his marked success and the high esteem in which he is held by his people, the communication in the Gazette of July 21 is a great surprise and whether ignorantly or intentionally, very wide of the real facts in the case. H. A. MINER, Sec'y State Pastoral Com.

The Barnum & Bailey Parade.

As a more indication of the greater glories to follow the Barnum & Bailey show day in this city there will be inaugurated by presentation upon the streets the most magnificent pageantry ever seen not only here but everywhere in America. There have been street parades and street parades given by shows beyond the recollection of all save the oldest men in the community, but it is safe to assume, from reports already received regarding the magnificence of the parade of the Barnum & Bailey show, that nothing like it, either in extent or in excellence, has ever been seen before. As a matter of fact, it is claimed by the management of the show itself that its chariots alone represent an expenditure greater than that of all the other street parade ever seen before with a circus in this city and the surrounding country to be upon the streets early on Barnum & Bailey show day, and they come with the certainty of being treated to a spectacle surpassing in splendor anything that they have ever seen. The day of the Barnum & Bailey show day here is Aug. 4.

TEMPERATURE IS OF SOME GOOD

REPORT FROM THE WHOLE STATE IS EXCELLENT.

THE CROP OUTLOOK BRIGHT

Corn, While Behind in Planting, Has Rapidly Gained the Growth Lost at First.

The extremely high temperature which marked the close of last week was followed by decidedly cooler weather, which continued throughout the week. In some localities in the northern counties the temperature was dangerously near the frost point, but other than checking the growth of vegetation, especially corn, no damage resulted. There was practically no rain during the week and farmers took advantage of the dry weather to push forward laying and harvesting of grain. The rains which occurred in the latter part of last week were in the form of scattered local showers, and while in most sections the soil is fairly well supplied with moisture, in some localities there is a marked deficiency and crops are suffering as a result.

Winter Wheat and Rye

The past week was very favorable for harvesting and these crops are now practically secured. The yield is generally considered satisfactory, although in a few localities wheat is reported below average in quality.

Spring Grains

Spring wheat and rye are excellent crops and maturing rapidly. Barley in the southern counties is fully ripe and some has been cut. In the central and northern sections it will be ready for harvesting in a few days. The crop is considered excellent, both as to quality and yield. The straw is generally somewhat short and although the heads are heavy there has been very little lodging. Oats are beginning to ripen and the crop is satisfactory.

Corn

The cool weather has checked the growth of corn and the crop is still ten days or two weeks behind the average condition at this date. The plants are generally strong and healthy and with higher temperatures, especially at night, a fair crop may be expected.

Tobacco

The plants are small for the season but vigorous and healthy. Potatoes have made good progress during the week. Blight is reported as occurring in a few localities.

Hay and Pastures

Haying has progressed rapidly during the week and a very large amount has been secured in excellent condition. The crop is considerably heavier than was anticipated early in the season. Pastures are fair but need rain.

Minor Crops

Sugar beets are maturing rapidly. The crop is large and the quality excellent. Peas for canning purposes are mostly matured and about half the crop has been gathered. The crop is large and of excellent quality. Gardens are in satisfactory condition.

Fruit

Apples are generally considered a good crop. Blackberries are ripening but the crop is not large.

Southern Section

St. Sterling, Crawford county: Some hay damaged by showers, but crop about secured, in excellent condition; some rust on grain, but prospects good.—F. F. Bell.

Ellis, Portage county: Considerable hay secured during the week; some rye cut; corn stands good, but needs warm nights; oats look good.—N. Elden-Mitchell.

Brooklyn, Green county: Rain needed to keep corn growing; oats and barley about ready to cut; tobacco making excellent growth; pastures need rain.—E. O. Wheelock.

Janesville, Rock county: Barley cutting just commenced; corn growing well; weeds rank; pastures getting dry, and some farmers feeding stock.—S. H. Joiner.

Bristol, Kenosha county: Weather favorable for making hay; corn making rapid growth; rye and barley in shock; general rain is needed.—F. R. Sawyer.

W. M. WILSON, Section Director.

New England.

Robust optimism is the prevailing note of all the reports received from tobacco sections. In the northern part of New England it is said that the crop is vastly superior to what it was at this time last year. Favorable weather conditions have more than made up for the delays at planting time. Broadleaf is experiencing quite a boom, and in many a district has almost completely displaced Havana. Reports from the southern districts are not quite so favorable. The cut worms, however, which threatened the crop early in the season, have almost entirely disappeared, and growers now estimate that the conditions are fully ten per cent better than last year. Comparatively little tobacco is being grown under shade, but there are still a few who, undismayed by their disastrous experiences of last year, are again engaging in the venture, and these claim that their crops are making a far better showing, and, furthermore, that they have found more economical methods of production.

AMONG THE WORLD'S WORKERS

News Notes From Various Sources of Great Interest to the Workman.

A history of the labor movement is to be compiled, Judge P. H. Dugro, Everett Macy and Robert Fulton Cutting, of New York city, and a Chicago man whose name is not disclosed, have among them subscribed a fund of $30,000 and placed the money at the disposal of Dr. Richard T. Ely, of Wisconsin University, for an investigation of the history of the labor movement and allied social movements in the United States. The work, it is expected, will require five years, and its results will be embodied in a document entitled, "The History of Industrial Democracy in the United States."

There has recently been unearthed an old labor law that related to tailors of England. It was in force until 121 years ago. It compelled a workday of 14 hours with a maximum daily wage of 48 cents, and provided imprisonment of two months for any tailor who joined a union.

A recent order has gone into effect on the Rock Island by which brakemen on day passenger trains north of Iowa Falls, Ia., on the branch and main line are done away with, and the conductors do the double duty of conductor and brakemen.

Nearly every shop in Boston, Mass., and all the shops in Cambridge and in the South Boston district have granted the request of journeymen horsehoers Union, No. 5, for a Saturday half holiday during July and August.

The Austrian Federation of Labor represents all the unions in the empire. They added 30,000 members last year, and have now 220,000. This seems small, but it is really a good showing in view of the government restrictions. The federation has 20 organizers in the field.

Boston, Mass., bakers, about 20 per cent, of whom are yet on strike for their demands, have started a co-operative bakery to supply the trade with union labeled bread and union made pastry.

About 500 union painters of Boston are at work after a strike of several months to obtain higher wages. The majority of cases the men have been given the $3 a day for which they asked.

Terrence V. Powderly may again be the head of the Knights of Labor. It is understood he will accept if unanimously elected.

A committee has been appointed by the National Cattle Federation to draft a plan of joint agreement between unions and employers.

The shipyards of Great Britain, all working together, could turn out a big ship every day of the year.

ABUNDANCE OF RAIN IS NEEDED

New Tobacco Crop is in Excellent Condition, and Farmers' Hopes Are High.

The transplanting of the crop has been successfully concluded, weather conditions being entirely favorable. Some growers have been bothered by bugs but on the whole prospects are encouraging for the few who have grown tobacco this year. Practically no transactions were recorded during the week in New York.

Wisconsin.

Buying still continues in a small way, though it is generally conceded that the unsold portion of the 1903 crop is now more than usually low at this date. There has, however, been no improvement in prices. In old leaf there have been some fair sales in the Janesville section. The new crop is progressing excellently and farmers' hopes are high. There has been abundance of rain of late, which has helped along the crop wonderfully.

Robust optimism is the prevailing note of all the reports received from tobacco sections. In the northern part of New England it is said that the crop is vastly superior to what it was at this time last year. ...Forty Years Ago...

Janesville Daily Gazette, Wednesday, July 27, 1864.—The Eleventh Regiment, which started from Memphis this morning, arrived here at about half past twelve o'clock and remained at the depot for something like a hour and a half. Mr. Anson Rogers furnished the boys with a keg of lager, to rinse the dust out of their throats—an act which they fully appreciated. The best wishes of the people go with these returning veterans to their future scenes of labor.

New Winter Wheat.—Messrs. J. & J. Clark, of the big mill, showed us a specimen of winter wheat, purchased by them of Mr. Tuttle, in this county, which is of very handsome quality, and will compare favorably with the growth of any year. We believe that this is the first lot of new wheat brought to this market.

A special election is ordered to be held on Thursday, July 28th, 1864, notice is hereby given to hotel and saloonkeepers, that their bars on that day are required to be closed.

The vending of spirituous wines or liquors on that day is forbidden by the city charter. John Mitchell, mayor.

Wounded Soldiers.—A number of wounded soldiers of the 12th regiment passed through here today on their way to Madison. They were from Sherman's army.

Milton Academy.—In our weekly edition this week will be found an advertisement of the Milton Academy, one of the institutions that is rapidly gaining ground in popular favor. Its well filled classes heretofore are the best of recommendations for its future success.

The Tempest in a Teapot.—We give room to another communication this evening from the feuding portion of the community, and so far as our columns are concerned, the controversy is at an end. If the belligerents are not now satisfied, they can arm themselves with yardsticks and broomsticks and meet on the public square and settle their difficulties. It is to be deplored that the army is deprived of so much real grit as has been manifested on both sides.

MR. BAILEY IS A WONDERFUL MAN

W. D. Coxey, One of His Representatives, Tells of His Great Power with Men.

"Mr. Bailey is certainly a wonderful manager," said W. D. Coxey, one of the advance agents for the Barnum & Bailey show here next week. "Mr. Bailey is a close student of human nature. Why, when the show started out this spring we had much trouble securing help capable of handling the heavy material used. The men thought they could not put up with the heavy reserve seats with opera chairs and platform. William H. Coxey, Delaware, they absolutely refused to work. Mr. Bailey stepped out among them and offered every man who staid with the show through the season a hundred dollars extra. Then, to stimulate them, he would offer ten dollars worth of cigars to the gang who could get their section up first. They found that they could do the work and now we have no trouble. When you ask Mr. Bailey a question he says 'yes' or 'no' so quick it makes your head swim. He can meet every emergency as quickly and if you follow his directions your results will be perfect. The Barnum show is a wonderful show. It is the biggest show in this country or any other. Just think of it: it takes eighty-eight cars to transport it. Other shows could do with lighter material and less cars, say sixty, but Mr. Bailey says that the better and more substantial the material used the safer his show is and with this in view he spares no expense. Why, the main tent pole of the big show top is as large as the mast of an ocean steamer and everything else is in proportion. The Barnum show spares no expense to give a good production. They pay large salaries and expect the best of work in return. Everyone who is with the show one season is only too anxious to go with it again. It is a funny thing that no circus ever does well in Janesville. By doing well I mean never has exceptionally large business. I suppose it is because the Burr Robins show was here for so many years and towns where winter quarters are located are never good show towns. I also suppose the fact that so many of the business men of the city have been with the Robins show in some capacity in times past they know all the ropes and are reluctant to pay out their good money to see the same old acts re-staged." Mr. Coxey left this afternoon for Rockford where the show exhibits after leaving here next Thursday.

GAINS MADE IN INSURANCE LINE

Summary of the Annual Report of Insurance Commissioner Host Made Public Today.

The annual report of Insurance Commissioner Host on life and casualty insurance in the state, which was given out today, shows the number of licensed companies to be 160, number of policy holders 457,546, and amount of insurance $655,857,451. The gains made in 1903 by life companies are: Policy holders, 69,765; amount, $63,474,461. The total of insurance, $63,474,461. The net gain for all companies was $15,497,258. Of this the saving from surrender and lapses was $13,246,002. The total receipts were: Taxes, $451,138; all other fees, $53,746; total, $504,885. Of the Equitable company, against which Mr. Host won his suit for the distribution of surplus, the commissioner says:

"The value of the Equitable's stock in two trust companies was increased in 1903 $3,682,175. Why should a life insurance company, established for the purpose of paying the amount of its policies to beneficiaries upon the decrease of the insured, ever forget the nature of its trusteeship to the extent of investing those funds so heavily in a trust company that the life insurance company's entire future is dependent upon the success of administration of the trust company? There is no question in my mind as to the morality of a transaction of this kind."

He asks all companies to join in the Equitable appeal case now before the supreme court to settle the question involved once for all. "The business of accident insurance is satisfactory and prosperous. Liability insurance is growing in public importance and volume, says Mr. Host.

Of the Prudential company, with which Mr. Host is now in litigation over alleged extortionate charges for examination and the commissioner's refusal to renew its license, Mr. Host says:

"But the purpose of the Prudential was not to right a wrong by the sudden acquisition of high moral convictions, but to intimidate the commissioner from holding up for condemnation the trust company affiliations of this company."

"How can this trust company with its $6,000,000 investment, obtain a proper return other than by using the life insurance company for its own purpose? Yet, these holders than those apostles of greed, holding the hope and protection of thousands of widows and orphans, for fifty years join in the chorus of 'stop thief' in an effort to escape the scorn and condemnation of honest men."

Mr. Host recommends the enactment of a law doing away with capital stock and providing for turning examination fees into the state treasury.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

CHOOSE WELL YOUR COMRADES

Little Bill doesn't like it sometimes because dad won't let him play with Tom, Dick and Harry on the streets. But, listen, Bill, to this barrowing tale of the lion and the hippo.

A lion and a hippo met very accidentally one day, and as each was attracted by the other they decided to set out on a journey together. They knew nothing of each other's habits or manner of life. But each was attracted to the other by what they saw and heard. "My, but you have a fine room," said hippo. "It must be a grand thing to travel with a fellow like you who could secure almost anything with that voice."

"And you," said the lion, "I like you. You have so much face. Why, you have cheek enough to make your way anywhere."

And so, without more ado, they shook hands and started.

They traveled a long journey the first day and were exceedingly hungry when night came. They found themselves in the midst of a great desert.

"YOU HAVE SO MUCH FACE."

where there was nothing but rocks and sand. The hippo sighed. "My, but I wish I had some nice hay or grass."

"Wouldn't mind a good fat calf myself," said the lion sadly.

"I thought you ate grass," said the hippo.

"I thought you ate meat," said the lion.

"Let's go to sleep and forget it," said hippo.

"Let's," assented the lion. But when Mr. Lion had fallen soundly asleep Mr. Hippo reached over and began to munch his long whiskers.

Mr. Lion awoke with a yell. "I beg your pardon," meekly said hippo. "I thought it was hay."

Sleep soon conquered hippo, but Mr. Lion was very hungry. He got up and seized the hippo by the throat and began to kill him.

The poor hippo shrieked for help. "Excuse me," said the lion savagely. "I thought you were a beefsteak." And he ate him up.—Atlanta Constitution.

EGGS ADVANCING IN PRICE EACH DAY

Another Cent Added to the Price Yesterday—Butter Remains Steady.

One more cent per dozen will be added to the price of eggs today, and the prospects are that this will not hold for long, and that more will be asked of the purchasers before long. During yesterday there was a demand for the hen fruit that could hardly be met, and it was decided the price would have to be boosted. This makes the price 18 cents at retail, which is getting pretty near the top for the fall.

Home grown blackberries were delivered yesterday for the first time and the fruit was quickly picked up. The price was 13 and 15 cents per quart, and there was a call that exceeded the supply. More deliveries will be made daily from now on, and there will be all that can be used.

No change was made in the price of butter, and the market is holding well at the prices of last week.

Gem melons are now quoted at $1 per basket and the price is said to be the best for this season of the year that has been quoted in some time.

Another lot of Georgia peaches will be received this morning, coming from Georgia. The buyers from local commission firms have become anxious for more of the fruit and they are having many calls for it from their trade. The Georgia fruit is of the same good quality as that of the cars previously received and these were touted as the finest fruit being shipped. Hanley Bros., commission merchants, received their first carload of watermelons yesterday.

Oranges are now being quoted more as a luxury than an ordinary fruit and the prices are getting near the top of the list. Where they had sold at 20 to 40 cents a dozen they are now quoted at from 25 to 30 cents and the indications are they will go higher.

GOOD LIGHTING ON THE PIKE

The Raff Gasoline Light Company Had Some Trouble, But Made Many Friends.

Forced by the non arrival of street lights, the Raff Co. used residence lights "on the Pike." The breeze from over the hill affected those in the open air, not being adapted for that kind of work, but those inside the tents and that at the clubhouse were perfect. Admiration was freely expressed for the manner in which the grounds were lighted with the facilities at hand, and the interior lights made many friends.

The lights the company had expected to use arrived this morning.

At 2:00 p. m. we had an extra order of 200 loaves just ready to be taken out and even then we will not be able to keep out of trouble. The other good things, wine cookies, layer cakes, cup cakes, angel foods, layer cakes, etc., are keeping pace with the bread.

POLICY DEFINED BY ROOSEVELT

changes can with safety be made only by those whose devotion to the principle of a protective tariff is beyond question; for otherwise the changes would amount not to readjustment but to repeal. The readjustment when made must maintain and not destroy the protective principle. To the farmer, the merchant, the manufacturer this is vital; but perhaps no other man is so much interested as the wage-worker in the maintenance of our present economic system, both as regards the finances and the tariff. The standard of living of our wage-workers is higher than that of any other country, and it can not remain unless we have a protective tariff which shall always keep as a minimum a rate of duty sufficient to cover the difference between the labor cost here and abroad. Those who, like our opponents, 'denounce' protection as a robbery, thereby explicitly commit themselves to the proposition that if they were to revise the tariff no heed would be paid to the necessity of meeting this difference between the standards of living for wage-workers here and in other countries; and therefore on this point their antagonism to our position is fundamental. Here again we ask that their promises and ours be judged by what has been done in the immediate past.

Recall on Reciprocity.
"We believe in reciprocity with foreign nations on the terms outlined in President McKinley's last speech, which urged the extension of our foreign markets by reciprocal agreements whenever they could be made without injury to American industry and labor. It is a singular fact that the only great reciprocity treaty recently adopted—that with Cuba—was finally opposed almost alone by the representatives of the very party which now states that it favors reciprocity. And here again we ask that the worth of our words be judged by comparing their deeds with ours. On this Cuban reciprocity treaty there were at the outset grave differences of opinion among ourselves; and the notable thing in the negotiation and ratification of the treaty, and in the legislation which carried it into effect, was the highly practical manner in which without sacrifice of principle those differences of opinion were reconciled. There was no rupture of a great party but an excellent practical outcome, the result of the harmonious co-operation of two successive presidents and two successive congresses. This is an illustration of the governing capacity which entitles us to the confidence of the people not only in our purposes but in our practical ability to achieve those purposes. Judging by the history of the last twelve years, down to this very month, is there justification for believing that under similar circumstances and with similar initial differences of opinion, our opponents would have achieved any practical result?"

Labor Problem.
"We recognize the organization of capital and the organization of labor as natural outcomes of our industrial system. Each kind of organization is to be favored so long as it acts in a spirit of justice and of regard for the rights of others. Each is to be granted the full protection of the law, and each in turn is to be held to a strict obedience to the law; for no man is above it and no man below it. The humblest individual is to have his rights safeguarded as scrupulously as those of the strongest organization, for each is to receive justice, no more and no less. The problems with which we have to deal in our modern industrial and social life are manifold; but the spirit in which it is necessary to approach their solution is simply the spirit of honesty, of courage, and of common sense."

The Panama Canal.
"Ever since this continent was discovered the quest of an isthmian canal to connect the Pacific and the Atlantic has been recognized; and ever since the birth of our nation such a canal has been planned. At last the dream has become a reality. The isthmian canal is now being built by the government of the United States. We conducted the negotiation for its construction with the most scrupulous honor, and in a spirit of the largest generosity toward those through whose territory it was to run. Every sinister effort which could be devised by the spirit of faction or the spirit of self-interest was made in order to defeat the treaty of Panama and thereby prevent the consummation of this work. The construction of the canal is now an assured fact; but most certainly it is unwise to entrust the carrying out of so momentous a policy to those who have endeavored to defeat the whole undertaking."

Foreign Policy.
"Our foreign policy has been so conducted that, while not one of our just claims has been sacrificed, our relations with all foreign nations are now of the most peaceful kind; there is not a cloud on the horizon. The last cause of irritation between us and any other nation was removed by the settlement of the Alaskan boundary. In the Caribbean sea we have made good our promises of independence to Cuba. We earnestly desire friendship with all the nations of the new and old world; and we endeavor to place our relations with them upon a basis of reciprocal advantage instead of hostility. We hold that the prosperity of each nation is an aid and not a hindrance to the prosperity of other nations. We seek international amity for the same reasons that make us believe in peace within our own borders; and we seek this peace not because we are afraid or unready, but because we think that peace is right as well as advantageous.

In the Pacific.
"American interests in the Pacific have rapidly grown. American enterprise has laid a cable across this, the greatest of oceans. We have proved in effective fashion that we wish the Chinese empire well and desire its integrity and independence. Our foothold in the Philippines greatly strengthens our position in the competition for the trade of the east; but we are governing the Philippines in the interest of the Philippine people themselves. We have already given them a large share in their government, and our purpose is to increase this share as rapidly as they give evidence of increasing fitness for the task. The great majority of the officials of the islands, whether elective or appointive, are already native Filipinos. We are now providing for a legislative assembly. This is the first step to be taken in the future; and it would be unduly unwise to declare what our next step will be until this first step has been taken and the results are manifest. To have gone faster than we have already gone in giving the islands a constantly increasing measure of self-government would have been disastrous. At the present moment to give political independence to the islands would result in the immediate loss of civil rights, personal liberty and public order, as regards the mass of the Filipinos, for the majority of the islands have been given these great boons by us and only keep them because we vigilantly safeguard and guarantee them. To withdraw our government from the islands at this time would mean to the average native the loss of his hard-won civil freedom. We have established in the islands a government by Americans assisted by Filipinos. We are steadily striving to transform this into self-government by the Filipinos assisted by Americans."

Action, Not Criticism For Complaint.
"The principle which we uphold should appeal to all our countrymen. In all portions of our country, above all they should give us strength with the men and women who are spiritual heirs of those who upheld the hands of Abraham Lincoln; for we are striving to do our work in the spirit with which Lincoln approached his. During the seven years that have just passed there is no duty, domestic or foreign, which we have shirked; no necessary task which we have feared to undertake, or which we have not performed with reasonable efficiency. We have never pleaded impotence. We have never sought refuge in criticism and complaint instead of action. We face the future with our past and our present as guarantors of our promises; and we are content to stand or to fall by the record which we have made and are making."

A GREAT SERIES OF WISCONSIN MAPS.

The Development of the State Much Assisted by Them.

THE NORTH-WESTERN LINE.

Completes a Task of Interest to Every Citizen of the State.

Nothing has been done in recent years towards exploiting the advantages of this state, particularly from a summer resort standpoint, that will prove of so much importance as the publication by the Chicago & North-Western R'y of one of the finest series of detailed maps of the lake region of Wisconsin and Northern Michigan that has ever been issued. There are over twelve hundred lakes in the territory referred to, and these maps show on a large scale all the lakes, trails, channels, and water courses, camps and hotels, towns and cities, in a most complete manner.

In the southern part of the state every wagon road and turnpike, lake, stream, village and town is shown in careful detail. Five of these maps are published in the summer book of the Chicago & North-Western R'y, entitled "Lakes and Summer Resorts of the North-West," which contains, in addition to the descriptive matter and maps, a complete list of hotels and boarding houses, with their respective capacities, rates, name of the proprietor and other information.

For the practical needs of the tourist, sportsman or traveler the book takes high rank among the many valuable publications issued by The North-Western Line, and should be in the hands of every person who expects to take a trip into the north woods, and of all who are interested in the growth and development of Wisconsin and the Upper Peninsula. It is the best exposition of the possibilities open to the state's summer resorts and fishing and hunting grounds that we have ever seen.

Railway Notes

One of the finest freight houses ever erected in Chicago has just been opened for business by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad company. It is located at Franklin and Polk streets, just west of the Grand Central station, and is designed for the handling of inbound freight.

The new structure is about 700 feet long, including platform at the south end. The main building is about 600 feet long. It has been especially constructed with a view of affording the most improved facilities for handling freight. Especially is this true in unloading from cars into the house, the track space being ample to insure immediate unloading of cars.

Another important feature to receivers of freight is the continuous door system, which makes it possible to accommodate a great number of wagons at one time. Arrangements have been completed for the immediate construction of an outbound freight house which practically will be a duplicate of the new inbound house. The entire expenditure for these improvements will approximate $110,000.

Announcement has been made that the St. Clair Tunnel company has decided to abolish steam power and adopt electricity for moving trains through the Grand Trunk tunnel under the St. Clair river. A third rail system is to be put in at an expense of about $100,000.

CAMPAIGN MATTER MADE TO ORDER

Host Announces That He Has Saved the State Millions, or Will, in Time.

(Special to The Gazette.)
 Madison, Wis., July 27.—Insurance Commissioner Zeno M. Host of Wisconsin has come to the assistance of Governor La Follette as a producer of political documents in the shape of periodical official reports. Heretofore the governor has been alone in the state administration in utilizing every opportunity to foist upon the people an official report, which shall be prepared and used as campaign thunder. Now Commissioner Host is at it. Yesterday he announced his annual life insurance report, which he will use extensively as a campaign pamphlet in his canvass for reelection this fall. The commissioner gives figures purporting to show that the sum of $13,216,002.97 was saved or "won" by old line life insurance companies operating in Wisconsin, by reason of lapses and surrenders of policies. Commissioner Host has applied an old law to require the distribution of this surplus among the policy holders not less frequently than once in five years. He has made a campaign issue of a law suit growing out of this application of the old law. The commissioner has been sued to recover some $21,000 which it is alleged he extorted from the Prudential company in the process of an official examination. In his report he defends himself from this charge and the report is expected to get many votes this fall.

COLD WATER MEN HOLD CONVENTION

Will Nominate State Ticket at Madison at Their Present Meeting.

(Special to The Gazette.)
 Madison, Wis., July 27.—The Wisconsin state prohibition convention meets in Madison today and tomorrow. Many of the delegates are already here and they are expected to number fully 300. Interest centers in the nomination for governor and in the question of whether or not the platform will embrace a declaration in favor of the La Follette primary election law which will be submitted to a vote of the people in November. Dr. H. A. Russell of Superior will be nominated for governor. He is one of the newest candidates to announce to his friends his willingness to accept the nomination and will doubtless receive the empty honor. He is one of the best known physicians in the state of Wisconsin and his friends declare he will poll a large vote in November. Oliver W. Stewart of Chicago, chairman of the national prohibition committee, and a member of the state legislature of Illinois, will attend the convention and deliver a temperance lecture.
